Creation and love help produce 'beautiful' art

Our 6th Form students donned their artistic aprons last month, as they continued their National Open College Network (NOCN) studies.

As part of the artistic element of the course, both year groups centred on the themes of creation and love in an art workshop.

Assisted by teachers, Mrs Hannigan and Mr Burke, together with local artist Elizabeth Lyons, the students took part in group work sessions that saw them get creative by sharing ideas based around the theme of creation and love.

James Vance (13D) was pleased with the end product, he said: "The art aspect of our work was a useful experience. It let us use our creativity to create something beautiful."

His thoughts were echoed by Thomas Roose (13R), who added: "During the day, we worked in groups to create a large piece of artwork that represents love and creation. "We had fun working together and were proud of what we produced."

Overseeing events was Head of RE, Mr Moorhead, who said: "Art has always held a central place in the Catholic Church. It is a wonderful medium for the students to express their faith, express the themes of creation and love and produce something inspiring and creative.

"The students in Years 12 and 13 were very diligent, focused and were thoroughly engaged in the art workshop."

News in brief

Oxford beckons for 6th Formers

A group of Year 12 students swapped Crosby for Oxford last month, as the prospect of life after Sacred Heart looms ever larger.

The 11 students, accompanied by Mrs Reid and Mrs Garner, travelled south to attend an Open day at Oxford University. Mrs Reid explains more about the day: "We arrived at Trinity College at 5.30pm and were shown to our rooms, which gave the students their first taste of university life.

"That evening, we took in some of the sights ahead of our evening meal before returning to Trinity.

"The following morning, Trinity provided us with a cooked breakfast, which we ate in the main hall.

Informative

"We then went on a tour, led by Oxford undergraduates, of St Peter's College and Christchurch College. Students were shown around typical university accommodation, libraries and social meeting points. The guides were informative and gave the students a valuable insight into the realities of life at Oxford University.

"After a talk about what is required to apply to Oxford, the students went back to Trinity College to have lunch.

"In the afternoon, students attended tutor talks about the subjects they are interested in and took the opportunity to visit more colleges. After a busy day, we left Oxford at 4pm and returned home by 9pm.

"The students were tired after a long day of university talks, but came away with an abundance of information in order to make important decisions about their future."
