Students start planning ahead at Careers Fair

Students at Upper Site were given the opportunity to think about their futures recently as the College held its annual Careers Fair.

Following the success of the previous years events, staff and students were keen to see what the 2019 version had to offer. The event saw representatives from numerous businesses and organisations attend to advise students from Years 9 right through to Sixth Form about their options, as they look to complete their school education and contemplate life beyond Sacred Heart.

Representatives from universities John Moores and Edge Hill were joined by guests from the Armed Forces, construction industry and sporting academies.

Overseeing the event was Mr Gardiner and he outlined his hopes for the students. He said: "It is hoped the Careers Fair has allowed Year 9 and 10 students to think about their GCSE options, whilst giving Year 11s a chance to consider what they will be studying or working after their exams.

"The event will also give our Sixth Formers a snapshot of what options are available to them once they complete their A Level studies."

Mr Gardiner was also impressed both with the mature way in which the students conducted themselves during the event and with the way they interacted with our guests for the day.

Mr Gardiner added: "Our students asked the organisation representatives plenty of questions and our visitors commented on how impressed they were, both with those questions and with the students' commitment to working out what they want to do in the future."
