

Heart to heart sees family and friends pull together

Sacred Heart is renowned for coming together and pulling out all the stops in times of need and none more so during the Coronavirus crisis.

As well as staff volunteering to keep the College open and running to enable parents who are key workers go to work, family, friends, neighbours and just about everybody connected with the Sacred Heart family is doing their bit.

Rose Campbell, mother of our very own Mrs Campbell, along with Rose's sister Pauline, answered an SOS from Huddersfield Royal Infirmary and Calderdale Royal Hospital's Intensive Care Unit for knitted matching hearts.

A spokesman for the hospital explains: "The idea is that the hearts are given to the relatives of those bereaved in intensive care as they are not allowed visitors.

"One heart will be kept with their loved one as they pass away, another matching one will be sent to their relative in a card from us so they can still share something physical with their loved one after they have passed."

The kind work did not stop there, as another SOS was answered by one of Sacred Heart's PTA members and her neighbours. With the shortage of Personal Protective Equipment (PPE) in the country's NHS hospitals and care homes currently dominating the news, PTA member, Gail Robinson-Burns, along with her neighbours, have set about producing face masks (below) for distribution amongst those within the NHS.

Mr Walker has backed the community effort, saying: "Sacred Heart has long played a strong hand in its charity and community service work, so please do get involved if you can in the current campaign. "I am sure there will be other campaigns to follow and, unfortunately, they will be needed too."

News in brief

Science Club is a hit at Lower

Before the lockdown, our young scientists at Lower Site were spending time after school in the labs taking part in a whole host of fun activities.

Biology saw the students spending time learning about the structure of the heart and dissecting lamb's hearts to show the different chambers and structures of the heart.

Lower School Science Coordinator, Dr Hanrahan, explained more about the students' time at Science Club. She said: "The students really enjoyed the different activities carried out in the weekly science club ran by myself and Miss Hughes. We also received help from Mr Wareing and Year 11 students, Erin Hanrahan and Megan Garcia (both 11D).

"We have done lots of different activities, such as, making ice cream, investigating fluids that act like a solid, balloon rocket racing and building towers.

"The students really enjoyed the activities that they may not get to do as part of their normal curriculum."
